Appropriate notice can be given to waters foreign to the natural stream system.

Statements of Water Diversion and Use made by riparian and pre-1914 appropriative water users as set forth in Water Right master record and specific exceptions. The filing of a statement (1) provides a record of water use; (2) enables the State to notify such users if someone obtains a new water right upstream from their diversion; and (3) enables the State to determine if additional water is available for future appropriations.

The above discussion is provided for general information. For rights to water involving riparian water rights, please contact the attorney of record in the case. We have several pamphlets available. They include: (1) Statement of Water Diversion and Use; (2) Information Regarding the Filing of Exceptions; and (3) Exceptions.

A riparian right exists as an owner of land bordering a natural stream or stream bed exercises the right to use and take water on the riparian land. Riparian rights must be exercised as the water source and must not have been severed from the source of supply by an intervening factor. The riparian right to divert water must be exercised during the period of a stream but may not be used to divert water for later use or to divert water within a stream if a different water source is reasonably readily available. Riparian rights may not be used to divert water from a stream but may not be used to divert water for later use or to divert water within a stream if a different water source is reasonably readily available. Riparian rights may not be used to divert water from a stream but may not be used to divert water for later use or to divert water within a stream if a different water source is reasonably readily available.

GENERAL INFORMATION PERTAINING TO WATER RIGHTS IN CALIFORNIA

There are two principal types of surface wave: Love and Rayleigh. Love waves are transverse waves that move horizontally, parallel to the surface of the Earth. Rayleigh waves are longitudinal waves that move in a circular motion, both parallel and perpendicular to the surface of the Earth.

Water is used for public supply, irrigation and domestic use.

PG&E delivers water to PCWA and MID at various delivery points in Placer and Nevada Counties.

GENERAL INFORMATION PERTAINING TO WATER RIGHTS IN CALIFORNIA

There are two principal types of surface water rights in California. They are riparian and appropriative rights.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on his riparian land. Riparian land must be in the same watershed as the water source and must never have been severed from the sources of supply by an intervening parcel without reservation of the riparian right to the severed parcel. Generally, a riparian water user must share the water supply with other riparian users. Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or divert water which originates in a different watershed, water previously stored by others, return flows from use of groundwater, or other "foreign" water to the natural stream system.

An appropriate right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914, new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State. Appropriate rights can be granted to waters "foreign" to the natural stream system.

Statements of Water Diversion and Use must be filed by riparian and pre-1914 appropriative water users as set forth in Water Code section 5100 with specific exceptions. The filing of a statement (1) provides a record of water use, (2) enables the State to notify such users if someone proposes a new appropriation upstream from their diversions, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future appropriators.

The above discussion is provided for general information. For more specific information concerning water rights, please contact an attorney or write to this office. appropriators.

Statements of Water Diversion and Use must be filed by riparian and pre 1914 appropriative water users as set forth in Water Code section 5100 with specific exceptions. The filing of a statement (1) provides a record of water use, (2) enables the State to notify such users if someone proposes a new appropriation upstream from their diversions, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future from the State. Appropriate rights can be granted to waters "foreign" to the natural stream system. An appropriative right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914, new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license system.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on his riparian land. Riparian land must be in the same watershed as the water source and must never have been severed from the sources of supply by an intervening parcel without reservation of the riparian right to the severed parcel. Generally, a riparian water user must share the water supply with other riparian users. Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or divert water which originates in a different watershed, water previously stored by others, return flows from use of groundwater, or other "foreign" water to the natural stream
